For more than 15 years, Mr. Corey Krueger has defended clients in civil litigation and related matters across multiple practice areas and industries. He represents employers in employment practices litigation, wage and hour disputes, and advice and counsel matters. He has also spent a large portion of his career representing licensed professionals (particularly those in the medical professions) in professional liability litigation and administrative license defense matters. Mr. Krueger's medical-legal experience also supports clients in general liability and personal injury matters, where he is able to effectively evaluate severe or catastrophic injuries. Corey regularly advises clients before, during, and after litigation, as well as during administrative investigations, helping them to adjust business practices in anticipation of, or in response to, the changing legal landscape.
