Hannah Wailes is an associate based out of the firm's Denver office. She focuses on healthcare litigation, practicing medical malpractice defense as well as insurance defense.

Hannah has an extensive outlook on healthcare, as she knows the industry from both sides. Hannah graduated with her nursing degree from Cedarville University and worked as a registered nurse for eleven years before law school. Eventually, Hannah decided to attend law school and graduated magna cum laude from the University of Dayton School of Law.

Hannah uses her background in healthcare, attention to detail, and critical thinking skills to work as a valuable advocate for her clients.
